FIELD WORK COMPLETED

On Sunday, April 24, a group of volunteers from Faith Evangelical Free Church spent over 8 hours working on projects at our playground. The church had over 1000 volunteers working on different projects that day throughout the city. We were very fortunate to be chosen as one of the neighborhoods where they would share their time and talents.

The group had approximately 20 volunteers from their church show up during the day. There were entire families, parents and children, working side by side to complete the jobs.

The group painted tables and benches, replaced boards where necessary, weeded beds, spread mulch that they provided and did general cleanup on the fields. Check out the pictures of the before and after and come down to the field to see the results. The shed was open to provide free drinks and snacks to all volunteers.

You won't believe what these kids are doing: Sewing

Orange may be the new black, but at Dieruff High School in Allentown, the Sew What Club is making blue the new green.

Teamed up with Lehigh Valley Health Network, sewing club members are turning the common blue sheets used to protect operating room instruments into ponchos, duffel bags, tarps and bedrolls for the region's homeless.

The idea came about last year at Lehigh Valley Hospital on how to turn some of the durable, waterproof blue sheets used to wrap surgical instruments trays during sterilization into useful, low-cost products.

The cloths are removed from the trays in the operating room before surgery and bagged, and then most are trucked off-site to be recycled. The health network estimates that it generates about 10 tons of the "blue wrap" each year.

Katie Velekei, a health network sustainability specialist, met with the Sew What Club at Dieruff and the project took shape.

The club has been in existence for three years, according to club adviser Ruth O'Connell. It was formed to do community service projects wherever they are needed.

Students have made cardiac, pillows and bags for Lehigh Valley Hospital-Muhlenberg, pillowcases for the Ronald McDonald House and even cat beds for a shelter.

O'Connell said she is thrilled at the reuse of the blue sheets and the students' embrace of the project. "It is not only making them (students) understand about helping people in need, but environmentally it is perfect," she said. "It's a reuse, not a waste."

Student Lizbeth Duran, a member of the yearbook staff, got involved with the Sew What Club after being asked to take a photo of the members. She fell in love with the club and what it does. "I feel so inspired," Duran said... "I have a home, I have food and they don't so I feel really inspired to do this for those people who don't have the things I have in life."

The Board of the Midway Manor Community Association is very proud to have people like Ruth living in our neighborhood. Ruth was our "Citizen Of The Year" because of all the volunteer work she is involved with. RABID ANIMAL FOUND IN CITY

The city of Allentown's Bureau of Health and Animal Control Officer are reminding pet owners to keep their animals up to date on rabies vaccinations.

A skunk tested positive for rabies the week after being captured in a resident's kitchen in the vicinity of Fourth & Allen streets. Residents had left the door ajar for access for their two dogs when the skunk apparently wandered inside. The skunk came in contact with the dogs, neither of which was vaccinated against rabies. The dogs are now under six month quarantine per PA Department of Agriculture protocols.

Animal Control advises feeding all pets inside, cleaning-up under bird feeders, covering trash and recycling cans and filling-in any holes around sheds to prevent den sites.

Residents are also advised not to entice any strange or wild animals to come near them. Residents should refrain from petting, touching or feeding stray or wild animals. Parents should supervise young children when outdoors and reinforce with older children not to pet strays.

If you have come into contact with a stray animal and have been bitten or scratched you should seek medical attention immediately. Rabies is an almost always fatal disease.

Security advice from APD

Sliding glass doors are being used by burglars to gain entry to a home; to limit access, place a bar or piece of wood on the door track to better secure the door;

Another con are criminals posing as utility or city workers to gain entry; one will ask the homeowner to accompany them to the basement to check on a problem while their partner ransacks the home; authorized utility and city workers have ID's which they should show you; if you are not sure DO NOT LET THEM IN and report the incident to the comm center 610-437-7751; if you are concerned for your safety call 9-1-1;

Father-daughter duo take Unusual path to nursing – together

Former residents of Midway manor –
Jamie and Erica Cernobyl

Partial reprint from lehighvalleylive.com

Jamie Cernobyl happily worked as a welder for 33 years. His youngest daughter, Erica, went to college for sociology.

Years after both established separate careers, the nontraditional pair graduated together with associate's degrees in registered nursing from Northampton Community College on May 26.

The two did not intentionally decide to graduate together. It happened by chance that both Jamie and Erica were accepted the same year into NCC's nursing program.

Jamie wanted to go back to school for nursing for years. He says he first tried when his three daughters were all under 10. "it just wasn't the right time, I had a great job and growing family. It wasn't necessary or anything," he said. At age 54, Jamie says he still felt it was his dream to be a nurse. So, three years ago, he began taking general education classes to head back to school.

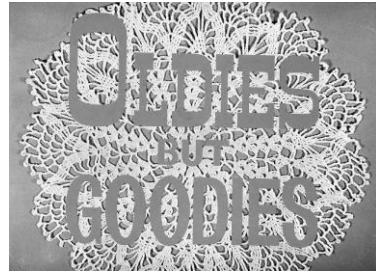

Now 25 and an Allen Township resident, Erica says she originally went to Moravian College for nursing but later changed her major to sociology. She was young for an incoming freshman – only 17 – and says she was not sure what she wanted to do at the time. Just three years after Moravian graduation amidst other careers, Erica realized her true passions actually were in nursing.

At first, Jamie started taking weekend and night classes in the program and Erica attended class during the day. After a semester, Jamie switched to the day to have an easier schedule. "I asked her first if it would be OK," Jamie said. "I knew she needed space and I understood that and let her have her friends." The two had classes together for the rest of their time in the program, which greatly influenced the nurses they are now.

The pair say attending school together had advantages and disadvantages. While the two were able to study together, they both worried that the other would not succeed. "If one of us didn't succeed at the end, it wouldn't allow me to fully enjoy the experience," Erica said.

Although both say schooling was hard, the two are excited for their futures. Joanie Cernobyl – Erica's mother and Jamie's wife – "lived and breathed" the process with the pair, Jamie said. They both relied heavily on her support.

"It's never too late to go back at whatever age," Jamie said. "I'm proud to see my daughter go back, too, as her heart is truly in it."

Words Lost and Found.

Would you recognize the word murgatroyd? –
Heavens to Murgatroyd!

Lost Words from our childhood: Words gone as fast as the buggy whip! Sad really!

The other day, a not so elderly (65) lady said something to her son about driving a Jalopy and he looked at her quizzically and said what the heck is a Jalopy? OMG (new phrase!) - he had never heard of the word jalopy!! She knew she was old but not that old. Well, I hope you are Hunky Dory after you read this and chuckle.

About a month ago, I illuminated some old expressions that have become obsolete because of the inexorable march of technology. These phrases included, "Don't touch that dial," "Carbon copy," "You sound like a broken record," and "Hung out to dry." Back in the olden days we had a lot of moxie. We'd put on our best bib and tucker to straighten up and fly right - Heavens to Betsy! Gee whillikers! Jumping Jehoshaphat! Holy moley! We were in like Flynn and living the life of Riley and even a regular guy couldn't accuse us of being a knucklehead, a nincompoop, or a pill. Not for all the tea in China !

Back in the olden days, life used to be swell but when's the last time anything was swell? Swell has gone the way of beehives, pageboys, and the D.A, of spats, knickers, fedoras, poodle skirts, saddle shoes, and pedal pushers. Oh, my aching back. Kilroy was here but he isn't anymore.

We wake up from what surely has been just a short nap, and before we can say, well, I'll be a monkey's uncle! This is a fine kettle of fish!-- we discover that the words we grew up with, the words that seemed as omnipresent as oxygen, have vanished with scarcely a notice from our tongues and our pens and our keyboards. Poof, go the words of our youth, the words we've left behind. We blink and they're gone. Where have all those phrases gone?

Long gone: Pshaw/ The milkman did it/ Hey! It's your nickel. Don't forget to pull the chain. Knee high to a grasshopper. Well, fiddlesticks! Going like sixty. I'll see you in the funny papers. Don't take any wooden nickels. Heavens to Murgatroyd!

It turns out there are more of these lost words and expressions than Carter has liver pills. This can be disturbing stuff! We of a certain age have been blessed to live in changeful times. For a child each new word is like a shiny toy, a toy that has no age. We at the other end of the chronological arc have the advantage of remembering there are words that once did not exist and there were words that once strutted their hour upon the earthly stage and now are heard no more, except in our collective memory. It's one of the greatest advantages of aging.
What say you ???

See ya later, alligator!

The below list is included in Easton's landlord training manual. Since the items on the list are very relevant to Midway Manor we decided to share it with our neighbors.

Ten Ways to Make Your Community Safer

- 1) Report crime promptly. - Don't assume someone else will call. Do it yourself. Police are unable to act without knowing there is a problem.
- 2) Report nuisances and other noncriminal problems promptly. - If you see something and think that someone ought to do something, then you should call and report the problem.
- 3) Take away opportunities for crime. - Lock your car and don't leave valuables inside them, Trim your bushes and trees to make it difficult for a person to hide and make sure you have a clear view of the street. Police will often perform courtesy safety checks of your home.
- 4) Make a list of the names and phone numbers of every neighbor on your block. - It's not society's fault that no one knows their neighbors. It's yours.
- 5) Meet the kids who live in your neighborhood and know them by name. - Naturally, you want to do this very publicly or in the presence of their parents.
- 6) Turn on your porch light. - Keep it lit from dusk to dawn. Neighborhoods that are well lit have less crime.
- 7) Walk around the block every day. - Neighbors benefit when responsible citizens walk in the community.
- 8) Drive slowly on neighborhood streets - This tends to slow others down, too, especially if they are behind you. And it might save the life of a kid darting out to get a ball.
- 9) Pick up litter near your home, even if you don't live there. - People litter less in areas where they see no litter.
- 10) Stay where you are. - Long-term residents make a community more healthy.

Doing the Most Good for Kids and Families in the Lehigh Valley

Every year, hundreds of children in the Lehigh Valley enter the foster care system after being removed from their homes due to abuse, neglect, substance abuse, housing issues, and family trauma. As the only foster care and adoption program of its kind for The Salvation Army in the United States, The Allentown and Harleysville based Children's Services program focuses on finding quality, loving temporary or permanent families for these special children and youth. Most children entering the foster care system in Lehigh and Northampton Counties are entering with at least one sibling and describe being split up from a sibling as a second form of trauma. As such, families willing to open their hearts and homes to sibling groups of 2, 3 or even 4 children is a huge need in our own communities.

The program, not unlike the international parent organization The Salvation Army, prides itself on paying attention to the needs of the communities in which we serve, then putting programs in place to meet those specific needs without discrimination. In order to fulfill this mission, Children's Services also offers an innovative approach to parent education and supervised visitation between children in foster care and their biological parents, called Visit Coaching. This approach to scheduled visitation allows parents to thrive through one on one pre-visit meetings with a trained Visit Coach, direction and praise during the visit, and a post-visit meeting to discuss strengths, and areas of improvement. The visits take place in a new environment called The Comfort Cottage in Lehigh County. The Cottage is set up as a home with a kitchen and multiple visit rooms, that look like a living room, complete with toys, books and games for families to enjoy together. This friendly, comfortable environment has allowed parents to focus on meeting the needs of their children in a place that is very similar to a real home which makes a transition easier for families when they regain custody of their children.

In addition to Foster Care and Visit Coaching services, the program also works with The Statewide Adoption and Permanency Network (SWAN) to license families for what is known as Matching Adoption with children already legally free for adoption in PA, but who are lingering in foster care due to a lack of a willing adoptive family. With over 2,000 children in this middle-place, families who are willing to care for these children and teens (commonly over the age of 8 and up to 21) are in high demand.

Approval and licensure as a foster or matching adoptive family can seem like a daunting process with questions being asked like "where do I start?" and "Would I even be qualified to care for a child with past trauma?" The answers to both question lie within The Salvation Army Children's Services' caring, capable staff and network of veteran foster and adoptive families. Monthly Orientation Sessions allow families to meet agency staff, ask questions, and hear information about the Child Welfare System and the role that foster and adoptive parents play in it. For more information, please visit www.care4kids.net, because every child deserves a safe place to call home.

A representative from the Salvation Army will be attending our August meeting to discuss fostering children.

COMPUTER PASSWORD MISTAKES

Passwords are your first line of defense against hackers and snoops trying to break into your accounts. You want your passwords to be rock solid so hackers don't even have a hope of breaking them, but that often isn't the case.

1. Too short

When you're making new passwords, 8 characters should be the absolute minimum, and 10 to 12 characters is recommended. For super important accounts, such as your banking account, a 14 to 16 character password isn't a bad idea.

2. Too simple

A strong password needs to have a mix of upper-case and lower-case characters, along with numbers and symbols. However, you can't just get away with simple substitutions like "Mayth3F0rc3Bw!thU!"

Something like that will slow a hacker down, but modern computers are fast enough to try substitutions like this as well. Your password needs to be virtually random.

Instead of just randomly hitting keyboard keys, however, try another method that makes the password easier to remember. Start by thinking up a random sentence. You can use a catch phrase, quote or even a song lyric like "Tramps like us, baby we were born to run."

Take the first character from each word to get "tlu,bwwbtr". Add some symbols in place of similar letters, so "u" becomes |_, the "to" from the original lyric becomes 2. Then, capitalized a few of the letters to make a strong password that's easier to remember than a random password: "Tl|_|,BwwB2R".

3. Not unique

You need to create unique passwords for every account you have. As we said, however, that makes it really hard to remember your passwords, which leads to mistake number 4.

4. Writing passwords down

Many people create strong, unique passwords and then write them down on sticky notes that they stick on their desk. Some people keep their passwords in a notebook that they leave lying around.

A hacker won't have much of a chance of seeing those, but what about snooping family members or friends? Maybe your house is robbed and burglars end up with your password notebook. If the burglars are smart enough they can cause you a lot of trouble.

5. Never changing passwords

You might have heard the recommendation that you change your password every 6 months, 3 months or even monthly. However, the Federal Trade Commission recently did a study that shows you shouldn't regularly change your password.

Regularly changing passwords is annoying, which leads to people making passwords too simple or reusing them. In fact, people who regularly change their passwords make them 46% easier to guess. In general, you should only change your password if you think its been involved in a data breach.

25 TOP WORST PASSWORDS

Every year, certain security companies release a list of the most commonly used worst passwords. For 2015, SplashData examined over 2 million passwords that were leaked online from data breaches and other hacking attacks. For the umpteenth year running, the worst password was "123456," followed by "password," which has also held onto the number two spot for two years. But, some people have decided to stray from other bad passwords like "letmein" and "monkey" and come up with new bad passwords.

Some of the new bad passwords include "starwars," "login," "qwertyuiop" and "welcome." Here's the full list, along with how each password has changed from last year:

- | | |
|----------------------------------|---------------------------|
| 1 - 123456 (unchanged from 2014) | 2 - password (unchanged) |
| 3 - 12345678 (Up 1) | 4 - qwerty (Up 1) |
| 5 - 12345 (Down 2) | 6 - 123456789 (Unchanged) |
| 7 - football (Up 3) | 8 - 1234 (Down 1) |
| 9 - 1234567 (Up 2) | 10 - baseball (Down 2) |
| 11 - welcome (New) | 12 - 1234567890 (New) |
